LESLEY HUNT

"Professionalism" is the most frequently-used word I have heard spoken by teachers, deans and guest faculty who influence and help develop the young minds at NCSA. If you ask different people on campus the definition of the word, you would probably get varying answers. If I had to define "professionalism" and had to own that definition, I would use as an example someone who owns stock in the word, someone whom I consider the epitome and model of professionalism. That person is Lesley Hunt.

Known as Lesley by everyone, she has been a pivotal figure in the school's prominence — from the early years through the present. She has been a consistent role model for her colleagues, students and the community for more than 27 years. Lesley teaches voice and acts as one of the assistant deans of the School of Drama. While all four studios take up most of her focus, she still finds time to work with stage managers, dancers, musicians, and many other students who comprise the entire school. When she is not acting in plays, teaching, tending her horses, or giving riding lessons, Lesley does extensive work with the AIDS Task Force. And for the past five years, she has made sure that someone is reading a story on Tuesday afternoons at the Stevens Center for Shorts for Lunch. She gives professional consultation for respected members of the community, including the mayor of Winston-Salem.

With all of this work to do each week, Lesley never complains, and is always available to counsel, coax, and nurture her students. She develops trust and respect from everyone through her straightforward approach to work and to life. Robert Moyer, colleague and director of the high school drama program, says "It took me two years to get used to her honesty and directness when it comes to myself and the students, and to her caring as much as she does."

It is this kind of caring, as well as the work, time, performances, and flexibility that make Lesley Hunt a Professional. She is a true guide — not only for showing students how to speak or how to hold themselves physically, but also for teaching them how to hold themselves emotionally. It is this constant prodding that gives students inspiration to work creatively and artistically.

You would never know any of this from seeing this short little woman in the Snack Bar. You would never know her subtlety, charm and wit. You would never know the chills one feels as she is leading a relaxation technique when she touches you and the tension goes away. If you have ever taken her class or had a workshop and heard her say "Don't wait. Be self-aware, allow the tension to be released," you would see how she takes you to some place without your knowing she's leading, and you trust she knows the way. Then you realize that in this Olympic-sized artistic swimming pool we are all being immersed in, Lesley Hunt is one of the head lifeguards.

— Corey Behnke

“Letter from the Editor”

Well, it is finally over. The yearbook is finished. I hope you are pleased, because we tried to make it different from the past years. Our main focus was to make the NCSA yearbook a memory lane of the entire school, not just dancers. So we did the best with what we had. I would like to stress the fact that if you have any suggestions for next years yearbook, please don't hesitate to say something.

My name may be written beside “Editor in Chief”, but I certainly shouldn't get all of the credit. I wasn't the only person who gave up a lot for this book, so I would really like to thank the entire yearbook staff. I would also like to thank them for their time, energy, and effort. Now I'm not going to go name dropping, and butt kissing, but I would like to thank a few specific people. Thank you Lauren, Doug, April, Lenny Cohen, Clay, Marla, Twyla, and all of the people who read our signs and turned in the pictures, without you guys there really wouldn't be a yearbook. So, in closing, have a great year and good luck with all you do.
